ASSISTING STUDENTS IN DISTRESS AT USU EASTERN
The purpose of this resource guide is to help you recognize symptoms of student distress and identify appropriate referrals to campus resources.

THINK

USU faculty and staff are in a unique position to demonstrate compassion for USU students in distress. Both undergraduate and graduate students may feel alone, isolated, and even hopeless when faced with academic and life challenges. These feelings can easily disrupt academic performance and may lead to difficulties coping and other serious consequences.

You may be the first person to notice signs indicating a student is in distress. THINK: Has your student displayed academic, psychological, physical, or safety risk indicators? Have you noticed any changes in a student’s performance or behavior?

CARE

Students exhibiting troubling behaviors in your presence are likely having difficulties in various settings, including the classroom, with roommates, with family, and in other social settings.

Show you CARE about your students by speaking up if someone leaves you worried, alarmed, or threatened. Trust your instincts.

ACT

Sometimes students cannot or will not turn to family or friends. ACT!

Your expression of concern may be a critical factor in saving a student’s academic career or even their life.

The Family Education Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) permits communication about a student of concern in connection with a health and safety emergency. Observations of a student’s conduct or statements made by a student are not FERPA protected.
